About This Game

Description

"The Baron's daughter is missing, and you are the man to find her. No problem. With your inexhaustible arsenal of hard-boiled similes, there is nothing you can't handle."

PataNoir is a homage to the classic stories of hard-boiled private investigators with a knack for describing everything with complex similes and metaphors. In PataNoir, you solve problems by manipulating the hard-boiled metaphors used by the main character to make sense of the world in which he lives.

The game is an old-school text adventure, in which you type commands to perform actions.

Features

- An interactive noir mystery to experience and solve
- Innovative interactive fiction gameplay in which the metaphors you live by become tools to solve the mystery
- Simulated book interface
- Atmospheric illustrations by Lauri Ahonen and Tom Siddell

- Original theme song by postmodern rock musician William Steffey

"I assure you that you will not regret hiring me. I will do of the baron to the utmost of my abilities."

A smile lights up his face. "I am very glad to hear that. It sounds just like the person we need. Unfortunately, I cannot find a word for it, you understand. I just need some kind of assistance."

>ember butler

His eyes light up with a friendly glow.

>butler

"Mr. Jameson, I think this might be the beginning of a new relationship."

He laughs heartily. "Please, call me Allan. It's really been a pleasure talking to you, Douglas. I am so glad I decided to visit you with one of the other people. They were all so glum and cold."

"The pleasure is entirely mine," you say with a smile. "I would like to see the baron?"

"Of course. Follow me."

Outside The Mansion

The stately mansion of the Baron von Bülow looms in the distance, a sleeping giant. Light seeps out from a single window on the right; all the others are dark. Two large mahogany doors lead to the entrance to the north. The path to the south leads to the garden of the mansion.

"Here we are, sir," says Jameson. "If you will just follow me, I will show you the way to the baron's study."

He opens the doors and disappears into the mansion.

It's funny, you can pick locks in people's eyes with the wiriness of their hair.

You do have to save before the scene where you can die, and remember to grab the (figurative) record before it's too late though.
